they will be prepared

Role of parents and carers

- The primary role in a child's sex and relationship education lies with their parents or carers.
- Parents and carers are best placed to know the stage of development that their child is at - whether emotional, physical or social.

Role of the school

SRE is part of our Personal, Social, Health and Economic (PSHE) curriculum.

Department for Education (DfE) recommends that all primary schools should have a sex and relationship education programme tailored to the age and the physical and emotional maturity of the children.

Our Aims (1)

- To provide an environment in which children may develop a healthy self-esteem and respect for their bodies and the bodies of others.
- To develop a sense of personal identity that will reinforce the child's growing ability to make the choices of behaviour and lifestyle which are right for them.
- To understand the nature of many types of personal relationships, including friendship, family relationships, love and conflict.
- To develop an understanding of the physical, emotional and sexual development of human beings leading to preparation for puberty.

Our Aims (2)

- To provide an acceptable, accurate sexual vocabulary in Key Stage 2.
- To counter stereotypical gender attitudes.
- To develop communication skills – speaking, listening, negotiating and assertiveness.
- To provide the necessary knowledge and develop the skills required to enable children to keep themselves safe and understand that they have rights over their own body.
- To develop respect for their own bodies and the importance of sexual activity as part of a committed, long-term, and loving marriage.

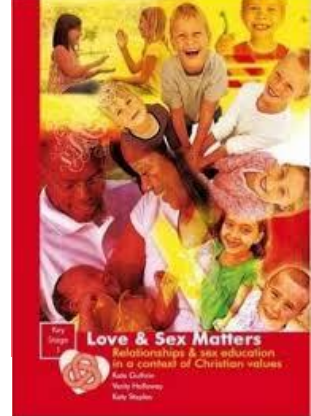

Organisation

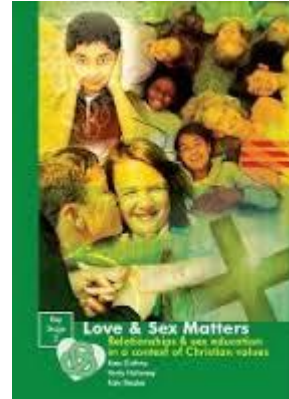

- Part of PSHE.
- Taught discretely.
- Summer term, so children are the most mature and teachers know the children the best.
